Dear Valued Customer,

Description of Situation

Newly generated measurements at Roche Diagnostics revealed additional carryover for several tests on the COBAS INTEGRA® 400 plus and cobas c 111 analyzer. The internal findings for a number of tests show that the product specifications were not met. The recommended wash steps were either insufficient or missing altogether.

In case of carry over, it cannot be excluded that incorrect high results were generated. A medical risk cannot be excluded.

Affected test (also identified as victims) are listed in the following table:

Material Number	Test	Instrument
06 750 052 190	A1MG	COBAS INTEGRA® 400 plus

	(Triglycerides)	CODAS C 111

^{*}Serum/plasma application only. The urine application is not affected by carryover.

Actions taken by Roche Diagnostics

The observed carryover will be averted by additional extra wash cycles. For some test combinations a needle assignment* is applicable (see table below victim/offender).

*Needle assignment means, that dedicated tests will only be pipetted by a specific probe to exclude an interaction of a victim and offender combination and the resulting carryover. This assignment is part of the software (TAS = Test application software) and cannot be implemented manually.

For COBAS INTEGRA® 400 plus relevant changes are included in the upcoming TAS, solving the primary and secondary carry-overs; the update is planned for end of December 2018.

The updated extra wash cycle (EWC) List is part of the updated Instructions for Use (IFU) for the Cleaner Cassette (V 8.0), which will be available in Q1/2019.

Please note: The updated EWC list for cobas c 111 is part of the updated Instructions for Use (IFU) for the Cleaner (V 6.0), that will be published in Q1/2019.

Actions to be taken by the customer/user

Customers running one or more offenders in combination with the affected victim applications (as described in the table below) need to install the required carryover evasions until the TAS and extra wash cycle lists are updated. For customers not running the affected tests no action is required.

^{} Secondary carry-over to TRIGL or CRE2 occurs only if a dextran sulfate containing assay is performed before CHOL2.

Hence these EWCs are only mandatory in case one of the following tests is also installed on the analyzer: HDLC4, HDLC3, LDLC3, PPXS, PPXQL, PPXQC, PCPS, PCPQL, PCPQC, MTQLS, MTQQL, MTQQC, HCYS, DIGM or any TDM test using SDR II.

For all carry-over evasions which require needle assignment the only possible workaround for the customers is running the applications in batches (batch mode) until the TAS is released.

[COUNTRY ACTION: You are allowed to modify the local availability according to your local release schedules]

*Please note: The manual set-up of the EWCs as well as the batch mode are only required until the TAS is available. However, the observed carryover of the test combinations of A1MG with OPI or THCII cannot be overcome with EWCs or needle assignment. Therefore, these test combinations must not be measured at the same time (batch mode required) even after the TAS has been published.
